Main Findings

- Majority of Michigan small business owners are hiring, yet struggle to find qualified workers: More than two-thirds (67%) of small employers in Michigan say they have hired new employees over the past three years. However, despite business growth, the vast majority of entrepreneurs struggle to find qualified employees. More than four in 10 (43%) identify “finding candidates with the right kind of experiences” as the biggest difficulty they face when hiring new employees; another 50% identify “finding candidates with the right education, skills or training.” A collective 92% of these small employers pick at least one response related to background, qualifications or experience when asked about their biggest difficulty when making new hires.¹

Please indicate whether you would be very interested in participating in the proposed initiative: Employ and develop apprentices through a formal, structured training program.

- Entrepreneurs are interested in implementing on-the-job training programs: Nearly three-fourths (74%) of small businesses support implementing a structured, on-the-job training program for employees.
- Michigan small employers support working with schools to implement job training programs at their businesses: Nearly seven in 10 (68%) small business owners say they would work with an organization that coordinates with local schools, community colleges, businesses and community organizations to provide job training and placement.
- Small businesses believe they should work together within their industries to help increase the number of qualified workers: 64% of small business owners are interested in working with other businesses in their industry to develop programs to increase the number of qualified job applicants in their area.
- Small businesses support hiring and helping trainees gain the skills they need within a specific timeframe: More than three-fourths (76%) of small employers say they would consider seeking out and hiring promising and trainable workers who may not yet have the required experience or certifications, but with an employer’s assistance, could obtain them within a specific timeframe.

Methodology

This poll reflects an Internet survey of 900 small business owners. It includes a national survey of 400 small business oversamples with oversamples of 100 small business owners in Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin that contributed to a survey sample size of 900 participants. The poll was conducted by Greenberg Quinlan Rosner for Small Business Majority with a margin of error of +/-3.27%. Respondents reflect a bipartisan consensus with 48% of small business owners identifying as Republican or independent-leaning Republican, 32% as Democrat or independent-leaning Democrat and 14% as independent or other. The survey was conducted from September 5-18, 2014.
